

Wednesday Challenge Form

Group Members: Team Moses.

Problem Statement: Create a line of PVC tubes and escort a marble into a bucket.

Approach: My classmates suggested that we should of kneeled when passing the ball, but strangely enough, no one wanted to execute the idea. So, we did the “normal” approach, and all of us stood up, smallest to largest with our PVC tubes. Eventually, after I launched the ball, I had to sprint to the other side of the line, because they didn’t have any PVC tubes. We we’re soooo close to winning, but I think I pushed my teammates too hard. We lost, and we could’ve won, If we we’re just more united in thought.

Solution: When working in teams, listen to ideas, and execute them accordingly. Yelling will not build moral.

Lessons Learned: Yelling at teammates isn’t good leadership. Rather than that, teaching is the more productive approach... or don’t lead at all.
